

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH: F. James Clatworthy, Ph.D

F. James Clatworthy, Ph.D. is an Associate Dean in the School of Education and Human Services at Oakland University, Rochester, Michigan. Professor Clatworthy is a veteran U.S. Forest Service Smokejumper [MSO '56], was selected as a N.D.E.A. Fellow at the University of Michigan['62-'64], served as a Research Fellow at the University of Michigan['65-'66], and has an Honorable Discharge from the Michigan Air National Guard['64]. He has taught at Oakland University since 1966; chaired the New-Charter College [inner college for General Education]; developed and directed the Education Specialist degree in School Administration which later became the Doctorate in Educational Leadership. His B.A., M.A. and Ph.D. degrees were all from the University of Michigan. His publications are easily accessible from ERIC[Education Resource Information Clearinghouse] and the current World Futures Society Directory of research members.

He has been married to his wife Julie for 39 years; has one daughter[Jennifer], and serves on a variety of local Boards, Commissions[Paint Creek Trailways] or the St.Clair Channel Keepers. He enjoys walking the Paint Creek Trailway or the Bridge to Bay Trail, swims laps and continues to search for the elusive hexagonari percarinata.